ANOTHER.

Ten thousand men obeyed his slightest word. He pressed a button at his desk, and, lo! Men who for years had struggled on and on Awoke to find their dreams of riches gone. And bowing servants saw him come and go. He spoke, and markets rose forthwith or fell. He governed all that mighty wealth will buy. Fame, honor, power, homage, he possessed. And yesterday you would have called him blessed. But millionaires and paupers have to die! The shouting in the market still goes on. Though whispering servants tiptoe through his hall. How poor was I beside him yesterday! How rich today beside his priceless clay! Make fast the lid and let the curtains fall. —S. E. Kiser in Cleveland Leader.

VINDICATED.

When M. de Bossue returned to the court in France he was most coldly received. The king refused to see him, and the king's courtiers were quite uncivil. At his sweetheart's house, in the Rue des Saints Peres, the door was closed in his face. He was filled with astonishment and grief, both of which were increased when he went to see his friends. All looked askance at him, few deigned even to speak to him, and none accorded him the explanation he sought.

Too proud to question strangers and yet sensitive enough to suffer keenly under the treatment he had received, he went to his room to brood alone.

There was a mirror here, and in this he surveyed himself. The hardships of war had deprived him of his good looks. His face was drawn and haggard, his skin wrinkled, his eyes were dull and sad, while across his left cheek a long, disfiguring scar told where a sabre had cut deep.

He left the mirror and sat down dejectedly. "I am grown ugly," he said, "and poor, and therefore they shun me." He thought of his life, offered to his country and to glory, of his hard campaigns in America and the Indies, of the famous battles in which he had done his part under Montcalm and Vandreuil. "But all this," he told himself, "has been in vain. The king, my love, my friends, they are none of them left to me. The only faithful one of them all—my horse, who used to lick my hand and neigh gladly at my coming—he, too, is gone, for I have sold him. No one—nothing is left to me!"

One black thought was succeeded by another, and his gloom and melancholy increased till life seemed but a burden to be got rid of. He was a man of promptitude and decision, and having come to this conclusion, he did not procrastinate. His pistol lay ready in his hand—one shot and the deed was done. At court they said, "M. de Bossue had the fever." Weeks and months passed, and they spoke of him no more. But there remained to Bossue an old time friend. After serving in Spain for some ten years and growing discontented with his work M. de la Comte de la Puysaye returned to France and to the court. He gained prestige at Mmes. de Bonfleur, De Chauvelin, De Surgerie and Luxembourg's, asked new service of the king, and solicited a regiment. He called himself a friend of Bossue. "Poor fellow!" he said. "Only 30 years old! What could have made him leave us in that way?"

His face clouded when he heard the story, for he was a brave man himself. "A coward!" he cried. "Impossible!" "But, yes," said his informant. "We repeat only what the reports said—reports which were sent to the king direct. M. de Bossue, it seems, disliked the enemy too greatly—so much so, in fact, that he could never bring himself to approach him."

"Bossue a coward!" cried the count. "He must have changed greatly, then. May not these reports have been false?" "Well, the marshal himself,"—and so on. La Puysaye heard the story repeated a score of times, and found that the mention of Bossue's name brought forth only curses or reproaches. He ended by renouncing him. "But," he said to himself one day. "I can't forget him. I loved him well, and I believe I love him still. Very well, I shall allow myself this little eccentricity—of loving a dishonored wretch. Bossue remains my friend, and of all the world I alone shall recall him with something other than disdain."

He hung the dead man's portrait on his wall once more. But the portrait was an old one and no longer resembled anybody. La Puysaye, discontented, wished for some other souvenir—something which Bossue had used. He thought of the horse. "Where is he now? They tell me that he sold him. That horse carried poor Bossue for ten years. I must find him."

Once, while his friend still served with him, he had seen the horse—a curious beast, of a dark yellowish color, the product of a cross between a Spanish barb and an Indian pony. He was able to furnish descriptions of the animal to certain men whom he sent in search of it.

The men were away three months. One day La Puysaye received notice that a horse answering to the description given had been found in a field in Artois. He went to the place and bought the animal at once. It was, indeed, Bossue's extraordinary beast, the friend of his friend, old and thin, worn by the hard service before the plow and the ill treatment of the farm hands. There were the white legs, still fine as those of a racer, the long, black tail and mane and those eyes, dark, cold, clear and fixed, that made one uneasy. "Strange animal!" thought La Puysaye.

hour as soon as possible. Taking hardly time for the writing of a letter and the saying of an adieu, he departed for that place, and gratifying his own wish he went there on Bossue's horse.

His new grenadiers grumbled among themselves. "Is it with that plug," they said, "that he means to lead us?" La Puysaye's friends looked at the beast critically. An ensign lifted its lip. "No use," said the count, "he's an old horse, and his teeth no longer mark his age."

"But why didn't you come on your black fellow?" "Oh, Constantine broke his leg, and—but do not laugh, messieurs—poor and old as is this charger he is good enough for the campaign. I judged that we should be only amusing ourselves here, and I did not wish to honor the enemy by riding too fine a horse."

The officers saluted smilingly, and the colonel, wishing to see the marshal, M. de Coigny, inquired the way to his quarters. Before going thither he left his horse with his orderly, who was going toward the trenches. "Bring him back to me tonight," said the count, and the man departed with the horse.

But not more than an hour had passed, and La Puysaye was just leaving the marshal's quarters, when an attack was ordered on a strong-point where 1,800 men had been killed the night before. The trumpets sounded and the army hastened to respond. All other tasks were abandoned and, with the others, their uniforms in order, their arms in readiness, the grenadiers fell into line.

Being ordered to hold his regiment in reserve, M. de la Puysaye conducted it behind a certain embankment, then sought to go after his horse. But his friends stopped him. "Not now," they said. "The place is exposed. You would be risking your life needlessly."

La Puysaye returned to his place and gave vent to his vexation. "Miserable orderly!" he cried. "My horse! See what he has done with my horse!" "Ciel!" exclaimed a captain in astonishment. "Why are you so concerned about the beast? From whom did you get him?"

La Puysaye, tired of keeping his secret, revealed it. "From De Bossue. He was, alas, one of my old friends."

The news was murmured through the ranks, while the officers marveled audibly. "What an idea!" they said. "Where is he, that we may observe him again?"

"In that trench over there, which is so exposed. My orderly must have been drunk to leave him in such a place."

"Oh," cried an officer, "I have no fear! Bossue's horse! The horse of a coward! He'll crouch when the bullets fly. You'll find him again safe and sound."

"After all," said the other, "the trench covers him. He's satisfied to stay in it. He won't come out."

At that moment a bomb came singing through the air, and from the trench calmly, proudly, defiantly, a horse emerged. He stood alone in the middle of the field, in a great open place—alone. The saddle was on his back, the bit in his mouth, and though he had lowered his neck in the silence following the first bomb, he seemed waiting only for a signal on his bridle.

"The coward's horse!" thought the army.

Just then the place seemed to fill with smoke, while the city beyond trembled as with an earthquake shock—three more bombs in the ranks of France, and 15 files were cut down like so much grain.

Somebody's Mother.

A ragged woman was crossing the corner of a public park in a large city where the children of the poor are accustomed to play, many of them barefooted. A burly policeman stationed at the corner watched the woman suspiciously. Half way across she stopped and picked up something which she hid in her apron. In an instant the policeman was by her side. With a gruff voice and threatening manner he demanded:

"What are you carrying off in your apron?" The woman seemed embarrassed and refused to answer. Thereupon the officer of the law, thinking that she had doubtless picked up a pocketbook which she was trying to make away with, threatened to arrest her unless she told him at once what she had in her apron.

At this the woman reluctantly unfolded her apron and disclosed a handful of broken glass.

In stupid wonder the policeman asked:

"What do you want with that stuff?" A flush passed over the woman's face; then she answered simply:

"If you please, sir, I just thought I'd take it out of the way of the children's feet."—Detroit Free Press.

Too Much For Belief.

One of the brethren went to Knoxville last August and fell by the wayside—he got drunk down there. After several months the bones of his fall reached his rural home, and he was brought up before the church.

"Brethren," he said, "I admit I got drunk in Knoxville last August, but I didn't mean to do it. How I have suffered in my conscience and in my pride God alone knows, and I trust he has forgiven me. Brethren, I want you to forgive me. I didn't go to get drunk. I took a glass or two of light wine with a friend, and later took a bottle of beer on ice, and then."

"Brethren," interrupted a good old brother in the amen corner, "I would be willing to forgive the brother for his fall if he would make a clean breast of it and tell the truth. But I move we turn him out for lying. He has lied to us. Whoever heard of ice in August?"

And they turned him out because he dared to say that he had seen ice in August.—Sweetwater (Tenn.) Telephone.

Her Age at Monte Carlo.

A curious story comes from Monte Carlo the heroine of which has lost a large sum through excusable female vanity. She entered the gaming saloon while a former friend of hers was winning in a sweeping style that seemed destined to break the bank.

"I am so glad to see you here, prince, and in such luck, too!" she exclaimed. "Do tell me a lucky number. It is sure to win, for you are now in the vein."

The prince generously placed a pile of gold louis before the vivacious lady, whose beauty had successfully defied the effects of 30 winters, and said:

"Put it all on the number of your years and reap a golden harvest."

The lady reflected, hesitated and then placed the pile on 27.

An instant later the croupier sang out:

"Thirty-six red wins!" "Heavens!" muttered the lady as she faintly. "Thirty-six is exactly my age!"

Chained Books.
The finest known collection of chained books is that in Hereford cathedral. It includes about 2,000 volumes, arranged in five bookcases, of which not less than 1,500 are secured by chains three or four feet long, each with a swivel in the center. A small collection of chained books, long forgotten, has just come to light in the vestry of the church at Sleaford, Lincolnshire.

COMMENCEMENT

Class of '99 Bids Farewell to the High School.

Students Acquit Themselves Creditably — A Fashionable Audience and Handsome Floral Offerings.

Last evening was the occasion of the commencement exercises of the High School and another class, this time '99, bade farewell to their Alma Mater. The exercises were in every way appropriate to the leave-taking and recalled reminiscences of High School days and the endless toil for education still unfinished. The class exemplified their motto: "Self-Reverence, Self-Knowledge, Self-Control. These Three Alone Lead Life to Sovereign Power." And as they sat upon the stage last evening they each bore the expression of determination and resolve to make this motto theirs' through life.

After a prayer by Rev. E. E. Thompson, Miss Doris Cleve arose and gave a hearty welcome to all assembled. Her "Salutatory" was impressive on account of its simplicity and candor. Miss Cleve wore a pretty white organdy over white silk.

Miss Lydia Culberson followed with the "Class History." She recited the ups and downs of '99 from its Junior trials to Senior reward. Her gown was a becoming white organdy.

"A Description of the Philippines" by Albert H. Jones was highly instructive and well worth the hearing.

Miss May Stevens solved the much-talked-of problem, "The High School and Practical Life." Miss Stevens wore white organdy trimmed in lace and insertion.

Miss Lucy Thompson spoke on "The Influence of Poetical Characters." Her discourse was most interesting and called forth much applause. Miss Thompson looked most attractive in a white organdy gown.

"The Prophecy" by Miss Helena Shaw was witty to the extreme. It was written in rhyme and predicted the future of each member of the class. Miss Shaw's dress was white organdy.

Wm. Sherman, valedictorian of the class, discussed the present situation of the United States and the Philippines. Mr. Sherman showed himself to be a good student and thoroughly conversant with the subject on which he wrote. He will enter the University of California in August.

After appropriate addresses by Hon. J. T. Campbell of Santa Rosa, A. D. Gordenker and Benj. Weed, the diplomas were presented to the young graduates by Hon. Robt. Howe.

Congratulations were then in order and after a round of hearty good wishes for future success and welfare dancing was inaugurated and continued until midnight. The decorations for this occasion were very beautiful. All the leafy and floral beauty of June were brought together in handsome effects, and these, together with the gold and white of the High School, transformed Union Hall into a real bower of loveliness.

The class of '99 have the INDEX-TRIBUNE's most hearty congratulations. May you live on always, successful ever, doing honor to your school and schoolmates. May you realize the height of your ambitions and reach the pinnacle of fame in a way most gratifying to yourselves.

WALTER SCHMIDT ARRESTED.

Pleads Guilty to Petty Larceny and is Fined $50.

Walter Schmidt, the fifteen-year-old lad who poised in this place as Jas. Scott a sailor boy in the U. S. Navy, was arrested at the Cafe Royal, San Francisco, last Saturday night by Constable Ohm. He was brought to this place Sunday evening by the officer, and placed in jail, charged with grand larceny in purloining a horse and cart from the Union Stables. Tuesday morning he was taken before Judge Cheney and on the advice of the District Attorney the charge was reduced to petty larceny. The father of the boy, J. C. Schmidt, a respectable business man of San Francisco, was present and explained to the court that his son was only fifteen years of age and at times was a sufferer from aberration of mind. He stated that he had paid the owner of the rig its full value and was willing to stand all the expense the county had been put to by the waywardness of his boy. Young Schmidt then pleaded guilty to the lesser charge and was fined $50, which was promptly paid by his father.

The ending of this unfortunate occurrence meets with the approval of the citizens of this town who are cognizant of the facts of the case. Mr. Schmidt while here made many friends, and our people sympathized with him to a remarkable degree in his efforts to get his son out of the toils of the law and save his family from being disgraced by the lad's involuntary act.

Death of Catherine Perry.

Mrs. Catherine Perry, widow of the late M. Perry, for the past twenty years a resident of Oakland, died at the home of her sister Mrs. John Watt of this place last Wednesday evening. About three weeks ago deceased was seized with a stroke of apoplexy from which she partially rallied, and on Monday evening last came up from her home in Oakland to be with her sister during her illness. Deceased was a native of County Leitrim, Ireland, aged fifty-seven years, and leaves a large number of relatives and friends in Oakland and Sonoma Valley to mourn her untimely demise. The funeral, which was largely attended, took place Thursday morning at 10 o'clock from St. Francis' Church in this city, the remains being laid to rest in the Catholic Cemetery. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

CITY TRUSTEES.

Meet in Semi-Monthly Session Wednesday Evening — Little Business Transacted.

The City Trustees met in regular semi-monthly session last Wednesday evening. Owing to the illness of Trustee Hartin and the indisposition of Trustee Davis, who has not quite fully recovered from a long siege of sickness, only three members were present to-wit: Trustees Duhring, Seipp and Harris. After the minutes of the last regular meeting had been read and approved the Trustees took up the bills against the city and passed the following:

Sonoma Electric Light Co., light for April	$17.00
Sonoma Electric Light Co., light for May	30.85
Robt. A. Poppe, binding and expressage	1.95
Jas. H. Albertson, salary	15.60
W. R. Stammers, printing	2.17
Total	$70.17

The matter of the License Ordinance bobbed up and was discussed by the Trustees, and City Marshal Albertson was instructed to enforce the ordinance strictly to the letter. Clerk Poppe was also instructed to procure copies of the various license ordinances in force in the different incorporated towns of Sonoma county.

Only one bid was received for cleaning the ditches running through the Plaza and along First-street West. This was submitted by A. Caminati and the contract was awarded to him for $24.90, the amount of his bid.

On motion of Trustee Seipp, seconded by Trustee Harris, resolutions of respect to the memory of the late City Marshal Robin were passed and ordered published in the local newspapers.

The Street Committee was authorized to make urgent repairs on Fourth-street East above Spain street.

President Duhring brought up the Water Question and stated that the application of private parties for a franchise would be considered at an early day. Owing to the illness of two members of the Board the matter has been laid over from meeting to meeting the past month.

The Board then adjourned.

Sad Death.

Alvina, the twelve-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Schuler of Petaluma, died at the home of her parents last Saturday.

THE PASSING OF A PIONEER WOMAN.

Came to California in '49 and Located in This County in 1852.

Mrs. Marie Christine Justi died at her home near Glen Ellen last Monday after a brief illness.

Mrs. Justi was almost the last of the pioneer women of Sonoma Valley. She came to California in 1849 in company with her husband, the late Capt. Justi, who died twelve years ago. Three years later they came to this county and for several years Captain Justi was master of the "Georgiana," a small schooner plying between Embarcadero and San Francisco.

The young couple, for they were young in those days, previous to their coming to this State resided in Charleston, South Carolina, where Mr. Justi was engaged in the jewelry business. Tiring of a seafaring life Capt. Justi purchased a 500-acre farm near Glen Ellen shortly after locating in this valley, whither he took his young bride. Here they lived and raised a large family of children.

Mrs. Justi was the mother of eleven children, four of whom only survive her, to-wit: Charles R., Leopold and Hulda Justi and Mrs. Hannah Merline Jones. Two of the children died last year, Frederick Justi and Mrs. Outida Gibson, wife of Mr. J. W. Gibson of Glen Ellen. The deceased, notwithstanding the original 500-acre farm was reduced to 40 acres through defective titles and litigation, was quite wealthy and leaves considerable real estate in this county.

Mrs. Justi was a native of Bachofen, Bavaria, and aged 73 years, 4 months and 8 days. The funeral services took place in the First Congregational Church, Glen, Ellen on Wednesday and were very impressive. The remains were shipped to San Francisco for cremation.

Injured in a Runaway.

Harvey Kinsey, Superintendent of the Cream of Tartar Works in Napa, was seriously injured in a runaway last Sunday morning. Mr. Kinsey drove over from that city Saturday evening on business and after spending several hours in town started for his home about 2 o'clock in the morning. When three miles this side of Napa his horse became unmanageable and ran away. Mr. Kinsey was pitched from his seat heading to the ground, receiving several severe bruises about the head and shoulders. The horse, after running a short distance, collided with an obstruction alongside the road and completely wrecked the buggy which belonged to a Napa livery firm.

Two Escapes From the Home Apprehended.

Two eighteen-year-old boys escaped from the Home for Feeble-Minded at Eldridge last Saturday afternoon. They made their way into Sonoma and were recognized as escapes by Kenneth Weaver, son of Frank Weaver of El Verano, and another lad, who notified Deputy Marshal Glynn, who took the runaways into custody and returned them to the Home. Dr. Osborne, the Superintendent, rewarded young Weaver and his companion by presenting each with a $5 gold piece.

Is The Steam Locomotive Doomed?

Men who ought to know say that in the next ten years every steam locomotive will disappear completely, and electric motors will supplant them. They also say that with the new motive power trains will rush along at a minimum speed of 100 miles an hour. This will prove a great blessing to those who wish to go quickly from one point to another, but no more so than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has proven a blessing to those who wish to go quickly from sickness to health. This is not an idle assertion, but a plain truth. The Bitters act at once upon stubborn cases of dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, liver complaint, kidney disease, malaria and fevers. They improve appetite, purify the blood, quiet the nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep. The trial of a single bottle will afford convincing proof. Sold at drug stores all over America.

Some Real Good News For Careful Folks

It has been one of the pleasing peculiarities of this store that specially low prices prevail when the demand for the goods seems greatest. Cottons are higher. The future promises further advances. We could make money on several lines of goods by storing them for the next three months. But this is your store, and both staple things and distinctively reasonable things are yours as wanted. This is a store for proper economists.
